Argentina

Billy learns in class about the country of Argentina and all the Argentine food.

Argentines eat all types of foods, but they are best-known for their meat. Any Argentine will say that the meat in Argentina is the best in the world.

Billy also reads that the beef there is famous. It is grilled on the barbecue. Steak and beef ribs are also very popular. The people there like sausage, too.

Argentinian people also eat lamb and goat. They use the meat from those animals as snacks in sandwiches or with mashed potatoes. Sometimes they eat "empanadas," small meat pastries with cheese and corn. They eat these at picnics. Billy thought he would like to try an empanada one day.

Vegetables are important, too. Argentines put tomatoes, onions, and lettuce in their salads, similar to American salads. Eggplant, squash, and zucchini are common side dishes.

They also make very good pizza. Billy thought, "My own mom makes great pizza." People eat quite a bit of pasta, too. It is a favorite meal there because many Argentinian families originally came from Italy.

Text:

Joe and Dad went on a trip to find bats. They knew that bats lived in caves. Dad wanted to find the cave where the bats lived. When they got there, they put up a tent. They made a fire. They knew that bats came out at night. They waited for the bats. Soon, they looked up. They saw many bats in the sky. They were all very small. Joe and Dad went into their tent. Dad looked out the window. He wanted to see where the bats lived. He found out right away. Dad told Joe, "Be very careful around bats. They can bite you." They both stayed in the tent until all the bats went away. The next day, they went home. Dad was happy. He saw where the bats lived. Joe was happy. He saw a bat for the first time.
